

How to activate one-click translation using Google Chrome

Didier Morandi – January 2022

<https://www.shpylgoreih.fr>

In the scientific World, most of the publications are today written in English.

In the Egyptologic Universe, you'll often find German and French here and there, when papers deal with hieroglyphs, for example.

If you are using Google Chrome™ as your favourite Web browser (you don't?), a very convenient free translation tool is embedded within the program: Google Translate™.

Yes.

This document will show you how to easily enable one-click Web pages translation within Google Chrome. If you need to translate texts or small documents, use Google Translate Online instead : <https://translate.google.com/?hl=en>.

A. Start Chrome and click the Control Panel Menu button (1), then click Settings (2) :

B. In the Advanced part of the Settings Panel, click Languages (3) then open the Languages drop-down menu and remove the languages you don't read, if any (4), then do not forget to enable the Offer to translate pages that aren't in a language you read option (5):

If you wish to have only pages written in a particular language to be translated, select a language and check the Offer to translate pages in this language option (6) :

C. Then, close the Settings tab, open any Web page not written in English and the Google Translate menu will show up. Click on English and the page is translated :

F A B
R I C
I U S

Découvrez Fabricius, une expérience Google Arts & Culture Lab qui utilise l'apprentissage automatique pour aider à traduire les hiéroglyphes égyptiens anciens.

Regardez l'histoire d'introduction

Commencer l'expérience →

English French
 Always translate pages in French
Google Translate

F A B
R I C
I U S

Explore Fabricius, a Google Arts & Culture Lab Experiment that uses machine learning to help translate ancient Egyptian hieroglyphs.

Watch the intro story

Start the experience →

English French
 Always translate pages in French
Google Translate

Voilà ! (in French : Voilà, in English : Voilà). 😊